O'Daniel and His Hillbilly Music Sweep Texas Vote

Flour Dealer, Political Amateur, Governor of Lone Star State

DEFEAT MAVERICK

Radical Texas Congressman Loses to A. F. L.-Endorsed Opponent

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—W. Lee O'Daniel, novice politician who made a shambles of Texas' political precincts Monday, assured his public he would be a "regular fellow" as governor, and scoffed at the possibility of dictatorship.

Latest Texas Election Bureau returns gave him 432,502 votes, a clear majority of 19,652 over 11 opponents.

The electorate of the 30th Texas congressional district apparently have removed fiery Maury Maverick from the House of Representatives and named as his successor soft-spoken Paul J. Kilgley. Returns gave the 38-year-old attorney a lead of 475 votes over Maverick, with only a few scattered votes remaining uncounted.

Maverick, ardent New Dealer, issued a statement Monday saying, "With the (local political) machine and anti-Roosevelt money they this opponent apparently did well."

O'Daniel Wins

DALLAS, Texas.—W. Lee O'Daniel, a flour dealer who crashed politics with a hillbilly band, apparently was chosen Texas' next governor and Representative Maury Maverick, ardent New Dealer, was seemingly defeated in Saturday's Democratic primary.

Two other incumbent representatives, one praised by President Roosevelt, were running behind in Sunday night's tabulation of returns.

O'Daniel, the man with the Ten Commandments platform and the blaring mountain music, appeared to have clinched the Democratic gubernatorial nomination over a potent field of 11 foes. The party's nomination is tantamount to election in Texas. It was his first dip into politics—but Sunday night O'Daniel had better than 400,000 votes and a 18,963 majority. Said Robert Johnson, manager of the Texas Election Bureau:

"There will be no material change. I am certain from experience that O'Daniel will retain his majority."

O'Daniel had 403,582 votes of the total of 789,101 tabulated. Ernest O. Thompson, railroad commissioner, had 181,993, while William McCraw, attorney general who was expected to furnish the chief opposition, was in third place with 107,309.

Ton Hunter, who never before polled less than 200,000 in a gubernatorial contest, was next with 83,433 and eight others were far in the back.

Maverick Trails

Maverick ran behind Paul J. Kilgley, San Antonio lawyer who compiled an impressive record as a county prosecutor. Maverick declined to comment when almost complete returns showed him trailing Kilgley by 589 votes. Only a few ballots had not been counted.

Maverick claimed Kilgley had the support of Maj. C. K. Quinn's "political machine." Reports were persistent that a recount would be demanded. The New Deal was not an issue, although Maverick was a known administration man and Kilgley said he would favor the administration but "never be known as a rubber stamp congressman."

Kilgley asserted the returns reflected a fair picture of what he called Maverick's "radicalism." He accused Maverick of C. I. O. favoritism. Kilgley was endorsed by the American Federation of Labor and Maverick was supported by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Kilgley favored amending the Wagner act to provide a "fair, impartial and judicial" Labor Relations Board. He advocated old age pensions and said: "I think the government can be progressive without being radical."

Representative W. D. MacFarlane, who only two weeks ago was referred to by President Roosevelt as "my old friend," ran behind Ed Gossett of

Buck Dixon Draws $250 Fine in Fatal Highway Accident

Negligent Homicide Charge Is Dropped in Court Monday

CASE IS APPEALED

Joe Morton Is Given $10 Suspended Fine in Accident

Buck Dixon, 20-year-old Emmet youth, was convicted in municipal court Monday and fined $150 on a charge of reckless driving in connection with an automobile accident on Highway 67 the night of June 13 in which Carl Hamilton, 18, of Emmet, was killed and five other persons injured.

Following his conviction, Dixon's attorney filed notice of appeal to circuit court. He was set free on posting $500 bond.

A second charge against Dixon, that of negligent homicide, was dismissed in court Monday on motion of Deputy Prosecuting W. S. Atkins.

Truck Driver Fined

Joe Morton, driver of an Arkansas Highway Department truck which figured in the accident, was convicted on a charge of operating the truck without proper lights. He was fined $10, the fine being suspended.

Hamilton died 45 minutes after he was brought to a local hospital. O. V. Thompson, 23, was also riding in the car with Dixon. Thompson lay in the hospital critically injured for several days.

Others hurt, but not seriously, were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Evans of Hope whose car was sideswiped, and J. W. Doggett and his son, Edgar Doggett, of Joplin, Mo. The car driven by Dixon crashed head-on into the Doggett truck.

The Dixon automobile, headed toward Hope, was trailing the highway department truck driven by Morton at the time of the crash.

Results Other Cases

Eight defendants forfeited $10 cash bonds each on charges of drunkenness. They were C. M. Green, John Loudemilk, R. R. Murrell, Thomas Gray, Anny Coyne, Zama Ray, Charles Arnold, and Foster Curtis. V. C. Simms and was fined $10.

Rodessa Logan, disturbing the peace, plea of guilty, fined $5.

Leroy Loudemilk, possessing stolen property, fined $25 and sentenced to 10 days in jail. Loudemilk, a negro youth, was wearing a pair of pants stolen from Jimmy Porter when the latter recognized the pants.

This occurred Saturday night in downtown Hope. Porter gave chase through the crowded streets and caught up with the negro boy near the Missouri Pacific depot. Porter took the boy to police headquarters where he recovered his pants.

Franco, as Military School Head, Trained Officers Who Were to Join in Rebellion

Came Home From Morocco Because of His Marriage

At Military Academy He Laid Base for Corps of Officers

PUSHED TO REVOLT

"Left" Government Led to Revolt of Army and Nobility

Nearly unknown to the outside world only a few years ago, Francisco Franco stands today as the military dictator of the two-thirds of Spain which his rebel legions have conquered during two years of sanguinary civil warfare. Milton Brown has written the life story of Franco, in a series of three articles. This is the second.

By MILTON BROWNER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

If it had not been for his marriage to the beautiful Dona Carmen, Francisco Franco might have remained in Spain, Morocco—where he won his spurs, his medals and his generalship—and might never have become involved in the political intrigues and strife of his native Spain.

But married life made him eager, in 1926, to return to Spain and make a home there for his wife and his little daughter Carmencita. Once more fortune favored him. The government had established a new model military academy at Saragossa. Here cadets could study two years before going on to special academies which fitted them for the infantry, cavalry, engineering or artillery. Franco was made the head of it and here for some years he worked hard training young officers. Later many of these were to follow his flag.

Franco had met French officers and admired their training. So, for a time, he left his Saragossa post and took a course in higher military matters in the French school at Versailles.

In the spring of 1931 came the municipal elections when the parties of the Left swept the nation. King Alfonso XIII abdicated and fled the country and the republic was set up. At that time Franco said:

"We must put the country first. Soldiers should stand aside from politics and think first of the nation. The good of the country and the greatness of the army must be the goal of all of us."

That might mean much or little. The republican government began remaking the army by retiring the old monarchist generals and putting in younger men. Franco then appealed to soldiers, disposed to revolt, by calling their attention to discipline. This, he said, took on its true meaning "when our own habit of thought is opposed to our orders, when the heart battles and secretly revolts, when arbitrariness or error is attached to the action of him who gives the order."

Franco's heart was clearly not with the new regime, but he was not yet ready to rebel. He received a stinging blow when the government closed his beloved academy. For two years he was a General without a job. Then in 1933 a government of the Right was elected and Franco was given command in the Balearic Islands. Here, as in Morocco, he won friends who were to follow his flag when he raised it in rebellion.

In 1934 rebellion broke out among the miners in the Asturias. Franco took part in its savage repression—a repression which made the surviving miners his bitterest enemies.

The rebellion over, Franco went to Morocco as commander-in-chief. A year later, when the real power behind the Right, Gil Robles, became Minister of War, Franco became his Chief of the General Staff.

In 1936 the parties of the Left once more came into power. Franco was sent to the Canary Islands as Commander. This was not only a demotion, but exile in a way. The Left wanted Franco out of the country. On April 14, 1936, the anniversary of the founding of the new Spanish Republic, there were many demonstrations against the army. Franco in the Canaries wrote to the Premier:

"I find a good deal of bitterness here at the way in which the army is being treated and I have to warn you of the dangers of such a state of affairs."

What went on behind the scenes is still largely guess work. Juan March, tobacco millionaire of the Balearic Islands, is said to have promised to finance a rebellion against the Leftist government. Many rich landowners

34 Killed When Plane Hits Crowd

Military 'Stunter' Plunges Into Crowd in South America

BOGOTA, Colombia.—(AP)—The government announced Monday it would pay the funeral expenses of the 34 persons killed and the medical expenses of the 150 persons injured at a military review here Sunday when a stunt airplane hurtled into a crowd of spectators.

Plane Was Stunting

BOGOTA, Colombia.—(AP)—More than 34 persons were killed and 150 injured when a military plane crashed into a crowd during a military review at the opening of the Campo de Marte near Bogota Sunday.

Doctors estimated the death toll would total more than 50 if it was feared many of the injured would die during the night.

The plane, piloted by Lieutenant Abadía, was doing aerobatic stunts 90 feet from the ground when it attempted to pass between the grandstand occupied by President Alfonso Lopez and President-elect Eduardo Santos, and the diplomatic stand.

A tip of the plane hit the stand occupied by diplomats and then struck the presidential stand. Wildly careening, it cut through bystanders like a scythe.

The inauguration was being viewed by more than 50,000 people.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico.—(AP)—Major General Blanton Winship, governor of Puerto Rico, escaped an assassin's bullet at Ponce Monday while reviewing a parade.

Telephone reports to the governor's palace here said neither Governor Winship nor members of his party were injured.

Police immediately returned the fire from among the large crowds attending the celebration of the 40th anniversary of the landing of American troops in the Spanish-American war. One man was killed by police and a number were injured.

Police said the first shot was believed to have been fired by a member of the Nationalist party, a group demanding independence for this United States insular possession.

An American naval officer from the aircraft carrier Enterprise was reported to be one of the eight persons taken to hospitals with injuries.

Donations Roll in for World Fair

Little Rock Already Has Raised One-Third of Its Quota

LITTLE ROCK.—In four days of solicitation, Little Rock has subscribed one-third of its World's Fair quota, and reports from many sections of the state indicate that before another week-end, a number of counties will have raised their portion of the $125,000 required to make the display.

County organization was completed in the state this week, and the remaining three weeks of the campaign will be devoted to actual solicitation. Chairman C. E. Palmer, of the Arkansas Centennial Commission, is enthusiastic over the way the people of Arkansas are responding to its first major advertising campaign.

"All they need," says Mr. Palmer, "is to be told our objectives, and they are willing to make liberal subscriptions. We have put real business methods into our exhibit planning, and we are going to New York with a display so unique that it will be outstanding. We are competing with states that have dollars to expend, but our dimes, but we are trying to out-class them. Our intention is to show what is actually Arkansas, and make of the display room a sales agency that will bring tourist dollars, new industries and turn the tide of emigration to Arkansas. And to think, all this is possible on an outlay of one cent for every visitor to our exhibit."

The motion picture trailer shorts, with sound, of the peach harvest, will be shown in all parts of Arkansas during the coming week. The narrator calls attention to President Franklin D. Roosevelt's comment about Arkansas exceeding the tide of emigration to Arkansas. And to think, all this is possible on an outlay of one cent for every visitor to our exhibit."

Chairman Palmer is now devoting three days a week to the financial campaign at Centennial headquarters, and has been exceedingly successful in his contact with the concerns and individuals who come under the head of large subscribers. Chairman Palmer is in direct charge of the contributions of from $500 to $5,000, and has already entered up several in the four-figure class.

and nobles did the same thing. It has been stated that emissaries of the planned rebellion went to Germany and Italy and got pledges of material aid in men and munitions from the Fascists and Nazis—aid which was later the decisive influence in Franco's victories.

The storm broke in July, 1936, when Franco hopped up in Spanish Morocco where the native troops and the Spanish Foreign Legion at once joined his colors. Throughout Spain a greater part of the regular army and air force did so. Most of the navy at the time stuck to the government. So Franco and his troops began to land in Spain where they were joined by the regulars. Badajoz, Merida, Saragossa were soon his. Burgos became his capital and on October 1, 1936, all the rebel generals recognized him as supreme chief.

Then began the real and terrible civil war with the bitter fighting for Toledo, Oviedo and later for Bilbao, with the constant bombardments from the air of Madrid, Barcelona and Valencia.

terms. In essence, it consists of making small loans to needy farm families who cannot obtain credit from any other source, and accompanying them with enough training and advice in sound farming and home management practices to insure the best possible use of the money. Loans are large enough to supply the family with the essentials for carrying on far more operations—a mule, plow, seed, a few chickens and other basic equipment and assets. They are repayable over a period of from one to five years and carry a five per cent interest rate.

A well rounded farming program embracing producing food for the family and feed for the live stock, is carried out by the borrowers with the advice and aid of FSA supervisors. Careful planning of the farming operations to bring the highest net returns is worked out by each individual with the cooperation of farm and home management supervisors.

Cubs Improve With One Less Manager

Bruins Need One Practical Baseball Man at Their Head

By HARRY GAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

CHICAGO.—Philip K. Wrigley improved the Chicago Cubs by firing Charley Grimm in that they now have one less manager.

But Gabby Hartnett or anybody else isn't likely to take the Cubs too far until young Wrigley takes a leaf from his father's note book . . . places one practical baseball man in complete charge of his baseball property.

The club established major league attendance records that still stand . . . made millions while Bill Veeck served in the capacity. It was Veeck who brought in Joe McCarthy from Louisville . . . put the outfit on the right foot . . . and kept it here.

And William Wrigley didn't interfere until he insisted on Rogers Hornsby's appointment just before the close of the 1930 season. The headaches which Veeck and McCarthy cured then started to recur.

Grimm may have been too much of a clown at heart to have been a good manager, but it's tough to see an owner hold him for the fact that he himself purchased Dizzy Dean with a bad arm. If O' Diz had reported with his flipper in shape, the Cubs now would be well out in front in the National League, and Grimm on the good side of the brass hats.

Instead, Grimm found himself working on a "24-hour contract" when practically all of his dependables couldn't hit the ball with a plank.

Fired For Winning Seven Out of Eight

And when Wrigley said "from day today," he meant just that, for Grimm was summarily dismissed when the Cubs, which Banjo Cholly succeeded in pulling out of their slump, lost their first game in eight.

Hartnett's future is much brighter in comparison.

"Leo will not be fired if the team fails to win the pennant," says the thoughtful owner. "That's too short notice. I think I'm safe in saying that he'll be given a contract for 1939."

Now all Hartnett has to do is satisfy Wrigley, Charley Drake, Boots Weber, Clarence Rowland, and several other Chicago officials, in addition to Tony Lazzera, Billy Herman, and another one or two players with managerial aspirations.

Drake is assistant to the president. Weber is a vice president in charge of operations. Rowland, who okayed the Dean deal, seems to have the final word on players. Just one big happy family.

Lazzera's Status Remains a Mystery
Nobody has yet learned why Wrigley brought Tony Lazzera over from the New York Yankees, whom the signor served so nobly for 12 long years.

Wrigley's explanation at the time was that he wanted some of the Yankee spirit in his organization.

But at his age, Lazzera may not care to go along fishing it out under one manager after another.

All hands by this time probably realize why Bill McKeehan declined the management of the Cubs when offered the position by Wrigley during the world series last October.

It seems that Wrigley made it clear

Problem of Relief Acute in Baseball

Pennant-Winning Team Must Have a Crack Relief Hurler

By The AP Feature Service

NEW YORK—One of baseball's axioms says a pennant-winning team must have a crack relief hurler.

That's about as true as the requisite of strength on the catcher-second base-center field axis.

And the front-running teams of both major leagues are up there partly because they have competent trouble-shooters—stout-hearted, strong-armed guys who march in from the bullpen to stem uprisings against starting hurlers.

The Yankees bank on Johnny Murphy. When the cannonading begins the Pirates yell for Mace Brown. Bill Terry of the Giants thumbs Dick Coffman to the mound when opposing batters get fresh with the offerings of Hubel or Melton or Schumacher. And the Indians rely largely on Rookie Johnny Humphries.

That quartet, along with the veteran Charley Root of the Chicago Cubs and Pete Appleton of Washington, has enjoyed most success among the relief twirlers this season.

Let's stake a look at these aces of the savior squad:

Mace Stanley Brown of the Pirates—As the pennant races approached the August stretch he'd won 12 games, saved several others and lost three. His record was so good Terry used him in the All-Star game. He's 6 feet 1, weighs 190 pounds, 28 years old. He has been coming to the aid of Pittsburgh pitchers for three seasons.

John Joseph Murphy of the Yankees—With the season more than half finished, Irish Johnny had not been beaten, boasted a 6-0 record. In addition to his half dozen triumphs, Murphy has saved 10 games for such aces as Lefty Gomez and Charles Ruffing. Johnny is 6 feet 2, 194 pounds, 30 years old. This is his fifth campaign as a reliever. His major league record shows 52 victories as against 22 setbacks. Joe McCarthy figures he is too good a trouble-shooter to be given starting assignments.

John Humphries of the Indians—He's a rookie who has won six and lost two. He is 6 feet 2, 185 pounds, 23 years old. He was the only Southern association pitcher to win 20 games last year. He pitched a no-hit game for New Orleans and in his next time out hurled a one-hitter.

Samuel Richard Coffman of the Giants—Dick came to the Giants after bouncing around the American league for many seasons. He is 6 feet 1, 170 pounds, 32 years old. He won eight and lost three for the Giants last year. His record for the first half of this season is four victories and one defeat. He's saved eight games.

And there's not a southpaw among these leading relief artists. They're all right handers.

flavor of all vegetables.

"Do not overcook" is the negative rule that must be observed if eggplants are to have a pleasing texture, Miss Conant declares. Vegetables are done when they are tender but not soft and flabby. Cook's are more likely to err on the side of overcooking than undercooking, she points out.

Introducing--America's Number One Trailer Family

By NEA Service
Somewhere in the United States today—perhaps along a dusty rural trail in the corn belt, perhaps by a shaded mountain brook—the Richard F. Vale family is camping.

They've pulled off the highway and set up a temporary home in their 40-foot trailer unit. The view out the living room window is a different one, probably, than it was yesterday.

And, wherever the site, the Vales won't be there long. If they follow their custom, they'll be off in a week.

You can lay the great mass of traffic on the highway right on the Vale doorstep if you can catch up with it. For the Vales are America's first trailer family. Two of the children were born in the trailer, the other two during brief stops at hospitals.

In 1929, the family, struck by "nomaditis," tired of waiting for the world to come to them. Equipping themselves with a modern prototype of the covered wagon, they hitched it to their car, bid the home town of Springfield, Mo., a farewell, went out to have a look at the world.

Since that day they have lived in the trailer constantly, traveling 120,000 miles. They have been in every state except Connecticut. Who knows, maybe they're Connecticut bound now.

It's a comfortable life. A regular income precludes the necessity of having to work their way across the country. Modern conveniences, including a radio and electric lighting generated by domestic motors, take away any "tent life" stigma.

"Why, we wouldn't trade places with anybody," says Vale.

In New York City the average week for office workers is 39 hours.

The entire car-and-trailer unit in which the Vale family has traveled since 1929 is shown in the top photo. The trailer itself is 29 feet long and 7½ feet wide. In the lower photo, Mr. and Mrs. Vale demonstrate that the compact kitchen, furnished with a gasoline stove and a washing machine, makes just as good a laundry as it does a cookery.
